Synopsis of Lecture.

Delivered Tuesday evening by Prof. Josephine A. Robinson, Principal of Ladies' Department, Berea College.

The lecture "Zigzag Journeys at Home" was an account of a journey from Berea to central New Hampshire and return, with a description of some points of interest on the way. The route lay over the Alleghenies and Blue Ridge, through Washington, New York, New Haven, and Boston, with a trip from New York to northern Ohio. The return was by ocean and by rail across Virginia and the mountains to Berea. The principal points of interest visited were Washington, Mt. Vernon, the Loran steel plant, the Boston Navy Yard, Fort Monroe, and Hampton Normal Institute. The most picturesque scenery was found along the Hudson River in New York and the New River in West Virginia.

Nature can only feed the flame of life with the food eaten which is digested. Herbivore will re-invigorate a weak stomach, and so improve digestion as to insure the natural bloom of health. Price 50 cts. S. E. Welch Jr.

An Important Decision.

The following "Opinion" given by Judge Walter Evans, in the Federal Court recently will be gratifying to the Authorities of Berea. The opinion was rendered in the case of the United States vs. U. H. Bergmeyer. Bergmeyer has license to sell liquor in Greenup county, this state, and has been doing so for a number of years. Bergmeyer shipped whiskey from Greenup to Grayson county by express and instructed the agent at the station in Grayson county to collect, which he did.

Judge Evans in passing upon the case (after the jury had found defendant guilty), said that in his opinion the defendant, who had shipped whiskey in jugs from one county (in which he had license to sell whiskey), to another county, where he had no license to sell whiskey, the money for the same to be paid on delivery, is guilty of retailing liquor without license.

Judge Evans fixed Bergmeyer's punishment at, confinement for one month in county jail, and to pay a fine of $100. The sentence was suspended.

The decision is a good one and applies with equal force to towns and precincts in one county as it does to different counties.

N. B. Let us see that our local laws are not ignored in this direction. Court decisions are of no avail unless we see to it that they are acted upon.

"It Never Rains but it Pours"

Last Friday night the literary societies of Alpha Zeta and Beta Kappa and their friends gave a pig roast; Saturday there was a Democratic Barbecue at Nine Wonders; Saturday afternoon the Republicans had a "Speaking" in the Tabernacle and last but not least was a Temperance Mass Meeting at night in the Chapel.

All the functions were well attended.

The Citizen "got an invite" to the pig roast. The shotes were "fat and juicy" and "done to a turn," the brown bread, baked beans and sweet potatoes delicious, (The Faculty, exhibited a faculty for solving—clearing up—roast pig and fixings.)

Those who went to the barbecue report a "good time"; the Republicans did not stint their speaker, (Mr. Burnham) in applause and Col. Demaree's address awakened enthusiasm for the Temperance Cause.

My Kind of Man.

The kind of man for me is one,
Who seeks no praise for what he's done;
Who labors not for man's applause,
But gets an honored name because,
With an honest heart for the right strives he,
And that's the kind of man for me.
The crown of honor he does not scorn
The honest rage of the lowly born,
Good cheer and hope to all he brings,
And looks at the sunny side of things.
His manly heart is as light and free
As the morning breeze. He's the man for me.
He knows a smile and a warm hand-shake,
Of from a stone a heart will make,
From which kind words drive out despair,
And plant an honest purpose there,
He looks for the good in men; and he
Is the kind of man I delight to see.

Mr. Covington, of Covington & Mitchell has purchased the interest of Mr. Mitchell, deceased, from the administrators, to take effect January 1, 1900. In order to meet our obligations by Jan. 1st., it will be necessary for us to do the greatest business in our career. Our entire stock in this short time must be converted into money, and we know of no better way to bring about this result quick than Extraordinary Low Prices.

After a careful consideration we concluded to name such Low Prices on every item in our store as will cause people to wonder.

It has taken a great deal of courage to do this at the very beginning of the Fall Season. But, we figure on doing a tremendous volume of business and at the same time feel that by giving mighty values that we are going to make many new and lasting Customers and increase the prestige of this store for the future. Now, we know, everybody knows that we always have given the best merchandise the market affords. For the Fall our stock of

THE LOOM OF GOD.

Day's curtains blue are furled; their muf-
fling glare,
That shuts Infinity from eyes of earth,
Is drawn aside; and now, august and bare,
The loom of God in majesty stands forth.
O swift and sure the shining shuttles fly,
Weaving apace the web of destiny;
Yet neither throb nor jar nor snapping threats
Breaketh the awful hush where God doth tread;
And I, an atom's atom, still am hurled
Onward and onward with this fleeing world.
I know not where, nor why; the vast design
Benumbs, engulfs, each struggling thought of mine;
I tremble in the starry stillness grand
That powerless I stand.
Yet with the web a weft sublimer still
Is wrought—as flowers bloom on warp
and woof,
So bloom God's thoughts in man if he but will.
Nor from his holy purpose hold aloof,
O, swift and sure as planets' swerveless flight,
Drawing the threads that bind the Infinite,
Our days go flashing—shuttles in the loom,
Weaving the web whereon God's thoughts
may bloom;
For living souls to rhythmic sun and star
The meaning give that doth complete or mar
The plan Divine; and whatsoever it be,
The mystic thread shall span eternity;
I tremble in the stillness, that one strand
I hold in mine own hand!

THE STURGIS WAGER
A DETECTIVE STORY.

By EDGAR MORETTE.
Copyright, 1899, by Frederick A. Stokes Co.

CHAPTER XX.—CONTINUED.

There was a brief silence, broken at last by Sprague, who asked:
"Has he escaped?"
Sturgis hesitated.
"That depends upon how we look at it," he said, gravely, at length; "he has paid the penalty of his crimes."
"What do you mean?"
"He is dead," answered the reporter.
"Dead? But I tell you I saw him—"
"I know; but he has died since."
"Suicide?"
"No," the reporter's voice sank to a whisper; "murder."
"Murder?" repeated the artist, startled. "But how do you know that?"
"This lump of lead tells the story," said Sturgis, holding up the shapeless piece of metal which he had taken out of the vat.
"What is it? A bullet?"
"Yes; the bullet which Chatham carried in his arm from the time that he was wounded by Arbogast, the bullet which has enabled me to trace him step by step, from his flight from the overturned cab to Dr. Thurston's and finally to his death in this very room; the bullet whose peculiar shape is recorded in this shadow picture taken by Thurston by means of the Roentgen rays."
So saying, he handed Sprague the photograph. But the artist had ceased to listen.
"In this very room?" he mused aloud, looking about him with awe.
"Yes. The story is simple enough. The man whose instrument Chatham was is not one who would care to be lumbered up with tools, which become positively dangerous as soon as they cease to be useful. This man, totally unhampered by pity, gratitude or fear, determined to destroy the accountant, whose discovery might have imperiled his own welfare. What mattered a human life or two, when weighed against the possible loss of his own life or liberty, or of his high social standing and his enormous wealth; for this man is both renowned and rich, and he appears to have brought wholesale murder to a science."
"Do you mean to say that wholesale murder can be indulged in with impunity in a city like New York, at the end of the nineteenth century?" asked Sprague, aghast.
"Yes; when it is done in the systematic and scientific manner that has been employed here. For this murderer is the most remarkable criminal of modern times. He has not been satisfied with killing his victims; he has succeeded in completely wiping them out of existence. Criminals have often attempted to destroy the bodies of their victims, but they have never before succeeded as this man has. He is a chemist of remarkable talent, and he has discovered a compound in which bone as well as human tissue is rapidly and totally dissolved. There it is in yonder tank. See how completely the liquid has destroyed the bone handle of this knife."
Sturgis, after showing the damaged knife to his companion, resumed his whittling upon the cover of the box on which the artist was seated.
"Chatham's body has been dissolved in that tank within a very short time. It has entirely disappeared; this flattened bullet alone is left, lead being one of the few substances which are not soluble in the contents of the tank. Fortunately he overlooked that fact. Genius has its lapses."
Presently Sprague ventured to say:
"If numerous crimes have been committed here, as you intimate, I do not understand how it is that suspicion has never rested on this house before."
"The author of these crimes has taken every precaution to render the chance of discovery quite remote. His dwelling-house on one street, and the bogus Chemical company on the other, are in communication through this underground passage, while apparently having no connection with each other. Moreover, he is too shrewd to make frequent use of this death chamber. That does well enough as a last resort, when he is obliged to commit the murders with his own hands; but I suspect that this man has other agents like Chatham, who do the dirty work for him and then quietly ship the bodies here for annihilation, as it was intended should be done with Arbogast's. Ah! yes; I thought so. You are sitting upon one of these bodies now."

Sprague started to his feet; and, following the direction in which Sturgis was pointing with his open knife, he vaguely discerned, through the opening which the reporter had whittled, a small surface of what had once been the features of a human being.
After gazing for some minutes in horror-stricken silence at the distorted face, the artist asked in a low voice:
"How did Chatham meet his death?"
"I don't know yet," answered Sturgis, gravely; "this man is no ordinary criminal. His work is clean and leaves no blood-stains and no disorder to tell of its accomplishment. He takes life with his own hands only when he is forced to do so; but, when he does, his method is masterly. It was easier to make away with Chatham than to pay him the price agreed upon for his complicity in the Knickerbocker bank embezzlement; and so his life was taken. I hope to discover how before I leave here."
Sprague started as the reporter ceased speaking.
"The price of his complicity?" he claimed, laying his hand upon Sturgis' arm and looking earnestly into his eyes.
"Yes," replied the reporter, steadily meeting his friend's gaze, "his daughter's hand."
Sprague looked away from the honest eyes of the reporter, as if he dreaded to read in them the answer to his next question.
"Who is this fiend incarnate, who is willing to traffic in his own flesh and blood, and with whom murder is a science?"
"The man who is capable of these crimes, and of any others which might serve to remove an obstacle from his way is—"
The reporter did not finish his sentence. He suddenly grasped his companion by the arm and stood transfixed, his eyes dilated, his neck craned in a listening attitude, every muscle tense like those of a wild animal in ambush about to spring upon its approaching prey.
Presently a click was heard as though a bolt had been shot from its socket.
"Draw your revolver!" Sturgis whispered hoarsely to his companion. "Quick!—Look there!"
At the same time he drew his own weapon and pointed in the direction of the door at the head of the stairs. The door opened and a man entered, quietly smoking a cigar.
"Dr. Murdock!" exclaimed Sprague with horror.
Murdock, still holding the door ajar, eyed the two men for an instant, his impassive face betraying not the slightest sign of emotion. Then, taking his cigar from his lips:
"Ah, gentlemen, he drawled, in his ironical way, "I am delighted to see you. I trust you will make yourselves perfectly at home for a few minutes. I shall return directly. You can continue to work out your little problem in the meantime, Mr. Sturgis."
With these words he calmly turned to leave the room.
"Stop!" shouted Sturgis, leveling his revolver at Murdock's head; "stand where you are or I fire!"
The reporter's shot rang out almost before he had finished his sentence; but Murdock, unscathed, passed out of the room, closing the door behind him.
Sprague, dazed by the rapidity with which this scene had been acted, stood rooted to the spot, without having made any attempt to use the revolver which he had drawn at Sturgis' bidding.
The reporter sprang up the stairs and threw his weight against the door. But it was doubtless intended to withstand great shocks, for it remained unshaken.
"Check!" came the sound of a mocking voice from the other side of the door.
Then, rushing down the stairs again, Sturgis shouted to his companion:
"Come quick! We must get out of here!"
And he led the way through the subterranean passage toward the cellar of the Manhattan Chemical company.

CHAPTER XXI.
THE DEATH CHAMBER.

Before the men had gone many steps a grating sound reached their ears from the direction of the skylight. They looked up and saw sliding steel shutters slowly and ponderously close, like grim jaws; and suddenly they felt themselves cut off from the outside world.
Sturgis, taking up his lighted candle, made his way to the door of the subterranean passage and tried in vain to open it; the heavy iron bolt remained immovable in its socket. Inch by inch he scrutinized the door with growing anxiety. At last he abandoned the search and returned in the direction of the square chamber.
"That explains why he wanted to shut me in here when I was in his office," he muttered under his breath. "What is the matter?" asked Sprague.
"We are caught like rats in a trap," replied Sturgis. Then with feeling he added: "I do not know how this will end, old man. I have bungled, and I fear the game is lost. If our lives are the forfeit, you will owe your death to my stupidity."
Sprague looked at his friend, as if surprised to hear him apparently abandon the fight.
"Don't worry about me," he said, kindly; "I came here of my own free will. But," he added, as a vision of Agnes Murdock flashed upon his mind, "I have no intention to die just yet, if I can help it. Are we not both ab-bodied men and armed? What can one man do against two?"

"It is not an open fight," said Sturgis, "but I am glad to see your spirit. I do not give up; but I want you to realize that we are in a critical situation, with the odds enormously against us."
"Why, what can Murdock do?"
"Perhaps what he did to Chatham. It will probably not be long before we discover what that was."
"But there must be some way of opening that door from the inside," said Sprague.
"There evidently is none," replied Sturgis; "he probably controls these doors from the outside by electrical connection."
The men were back in the square chamber. Sturgis' eyes were roving restlessly over the walls, ceiling and floor in search of a loophole of escape.
"There is no chance to reach the skylight without a ladder; and even if we could reach it, we should be no further advanced, as it would be impossible to make any impression on the steel shutters. That leaves the register and the speaking tube. While I examine the register, suppose you try the tube. If it connects with the Manhattan Chemical company's office, there is a bare chance that we may attract the attention of the detectives whom we left there."
"As we were saying, Mr. Sturgis—"
The words came in Murdock's mocking tones.
Sturgis quickly held the lighted candle above his head and peered in the direction whence came the sound. A panel of the door at the head of the stairs had been pushed up, revealing a small opening, covered by a strong and closely-woven wire netting.
"As we were saying, 'murder will out!' Nevertheless, it is sometimes easier to weld a chain, even of circumstantial evidence, than it is to predict who will be bound in it."
Sturgis and Sprague stood in the glimmering light of the candle, silently watching the glowing eyes behind the screen.
"Mr. Sturgis, you are a clever man," continued Murdock, "an uncommonly clever man. I frankly admit that I had underrated your ability. But then we are all fallible, after all. I made my share of blunders, as you seem to have discovered; but you will doubtless now concede that your own course has not been entirely free from errors. And now that we have reached the conclusion of this interesting game, I have the honor to announce: 'Mate in one move!' Perhaps you are surprised that I should take the trouble to explain the situation to you so clearly. I do so in recognition of your superior intelligence. I see in you a peer. If matters could have been so arranged, I should have been proud to work in harmony with such a man as you; and indeed, when a short time ago I invited you to my laboratory, it was my intention to offer you a compromise which I hoped I might be able to persuade you to accept. I felt that you would prove an ally who could be trusted. But, alas, that is impossible now, on account of your friend's presence. With all due respect to Mr. Sprague, as an amiable man of the world and a prince of good fellows, it may be said that he is not one of us. Much to my sorrow, therefore, I am left no alternative to the course I am about to adopt. The fault, if anybody's, is your own, after all, Mr. Sprague. There is a hoaxily but expressive adage concerning the danger of 'monkeying' with a buzz saw. Why, my dear friend, did you 'monkey' with Mr. Sturgis' buzz saw, instead of sticking to your palette and maulstick?"

"But I fear I am growing garrulous, gentlemen. If I had time, I should like to explain to Mr. Sturgis the details of some of the more important, and, in my humble opinion, more brilliant, schemes of which I have been the—ah—the promoter; for I dislike to be judged by the bungling operations which, have so nearly caused me to lose this latest little game. But this cannot be. I shall have to continue to confide to the pages of my journal, as I have done for years, the interesting events of, I may say, a somewhat remarkable career, which I hope will some day, after my death, find their way in print to public favor. My dream has always been that some such man as Mr. Sturgis might ultimately edit these memoirs; but, alas, the fondest of human dreams are seldom destined to be realized."
"Now, then, gentlemen, before finally parting with you, I wish to honorably carry out the terms of my wager with Mr. Sturgis. I concede the fact that, to all intents and purposes, he has won the bet, and I authorize you, Mr. Sprague, as stakeholder, to pay him the amount I deposited with you. As I have already suggested, he has made some perhaps excusable mistakes; but, then, as he himself stated the other night, 'a detective has a lifetime in which to correct a blunder.' A lifetime! It is not in accordance with Mr. Sturgis' usual practice to use so vague a term. A lifetime is not necessarily a very long time, Mr. Sturgis."

During this tirade Sturgis and Sprague had remained standing with their eyes fixed upon the gleaming carbuncles which peered at them from behind the grated peephole at the top of the stairs. The artist seemed to realize that the fight was lost. His attitude was that of a brave man accepting, with calm despair, an unpleasant but inevitable doom. The reporter had drawn his revolver at the first sound of Murdock's voice, but had immediately returned it to his pocket upon realizing that the chemist was protected by a bullet-proof grating. Now, pale and collected, he remained inscrutable. It was impossible, even for the sharp eyes of Murdock, to determine whether he was at last resigned to his fate, or whether his active mind was still on the alert for a loophole of escape.
The bit of candle which he held in his hand had burned so low that at last he was unable to hold it without risk of burning his fingers. Whereupon he coolly set it down upon the stone floor, where presently the wick fell over into a pool of molten paraffine, and the flame sputtered noisily, sending fitful gleams through the darkness.
"Well," continued Murdock's voice, "it is at any rate a great satisfaction to play a game with an adversary worthy of one's steel. You have played well, Mr. Sturgis. I think you would have won modestly; and you are losing as I would myself have lost, had our positions been reversed. Good-bye."
The gleaming eyes disappeared from the grating and the sliding panel closed with a metallic click.
"Now, then," said Sturgis to his companion, "the last chance lies in the speaking tube. But first help me move this box."
"What do you want to do with the box?" asked Sprague, who, however, did as he was bid.
"It may help us to gain a little time. Put it down here."
Sturgis struck a match and pointed out the spot.
"On the hot-air register?"
"On what looks like a hot-air register. Did you ever see a hot-air register with no apparent means of shutting off the heat?"
Sprague, who stood almost over the register, suddenly threw back his head and gasped for breath.
"You have discovered the secret of this death trap," said Sturgis, observing him.
"Gas!" spluttered the artist.
"Yes, he is going to asphyxiate us. Now, quick, to the speaking tube! The box will somewhat retard the rush of gas; but, at the best, it is only a question of minutes before the air becomes so charged as to render respiration impossible."

HAD A TOOTH TO PICK.

The Lascivious Mistake of an Oriental Diplomat Whose English Was Weak.

"In earlier days," said H. L. Wilson, of Washington, D. C., relates the New York Tribune, "a diplomat came to us from out the east who was a source of joy and never ending pleasure while he sojourned among us. His short, well-built figure was surmounted by a head out of all proportion to the body beneath, which to maintain a perfect symmetry should have been joined to a far larger trunk. This disproportion of head to body led a certain young wit of the capital to remark on first catching sight of the newcomer: 'He looks as if he'd picked up his head on a battlefield, doesn't he?' The visitor from the orient signaled his advent into the social life of Washington by giving a dinner, at which, he being a bachelor, the wife of a fellow-member of the corps acted as hostess. To her as she entered his house, adhering to a certain custom of the east, with a deep salaam he presented a salver upon which rested some bread and salt and a highly chased key of pure gold, which supposedly gave entrance to his treasure chest, the whole combination testifying hospitality and confidence. Now, this key was very beautiful, and the wife of his fellow diplomat, having regarded it with a covetous eye when she found it presented to her, promptly put it into her pocket, and left it there, to the manifest and ill-concealed chagrin of her host.
"In his first days in Washington, but after he had learned sufficient English to maintain a running conversation, he became ambitious, and essayed the idiom of the newly-acquired tongue with something of disaster to himself, for at a ball one evening he went up to a debutante and greeted her with: 'Ah hal I've got a tooth to pick with you.'
"He has gone from us now, but he has left a vacant place behind him, for he was a good fellow, and clever as well, and you were always sure that he would furnish constant food for talk the season through."
Sweet Knew the Origin.
The late Leonard Sweet always prided himself on his ability to trace expressions to their derivatives. On one occasion a man speaking to him referred to another as "a son of a sea cook." Mr. Sweet turned abruptly and said: "That expression is not correct. You mean the son of a sekaw, which is a perversion of the Indian name sekonk, which means skunk, and is usually pronounced 'sekaw.' Few people ever use the term correctly or comprehend its meaning."—Chicago Chron tele.

"I do not feel very well. I am so tired all the time. I do not know what is the matter with me."
You hear these words every day; as often as you meet your friends just so often are these words repeated. More than likely you speak the same significant words yourself, and no doubt you do feel far from well most of the time.
Mrs. Ella Rice, of Chelsea, Wis., whose portrait we publish, writes that she suffered for two years with bearing-down pains, headache, backache, and had all kinds of miserable feelings, all of which was caused by falling and inflammation of the womb, and after doctoring with physicians and numerous medicines she was entirely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you are troubled with pains, fainting spells, depression of spirits, reluctance to go anywhere, headache, backache, and always tired, please remember that there is an absolute remedy which will relieve you of your suffering as it did Mrs. Rice. Proof is monumental that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the greatest medicine for suffering women. No other medicine has made the cures that it has, and no other woman has helped so many women by direct advice as has Mrs. Pinkham; her experience is greater than that of any living person. TEXAS
One of the great advantages of going to Texas via the Cotton Belt is, that you avoid the annoyances and discomforts of changing cars, necessary on other routes.
The Cotton Belt trains are the only ones that run through from Memphis to Texas without change.
These trains carry Pullman Sleepers at night, Parlor Cafe Cars during the day, and Through Coaches and Free Reclining Chair Cars both day and night. The service compares favorably with that of any road in the country. Write and tell us where you are going and when you will leave, and we will tell you what your ticket will cost and what train to take to make the best time and connections. We will also send you an interesting little booklet, "A Trip to Texas."

RUSSIANS JOIN HANDS.

Southern and Northern Armies Unite at Tchling, North of Mukden.

This Places All of Manchuria East of the River Liao and a Portion West of the Stream in Their Hands.

London, Oct. 15.—A special dispatch dated October 13, says: "At the American legation Li Hung Chang expressed regret for the recent occurrences and thanked the Americans for their good treatment of the Chinese. He promised to request that negotiations be begun at Tsung Li Yamen two days hence and to exclude Yung Lu from them."

"It is asserted" says the Shanghai correspondent of the Times, writing Saturday, "that the Russians have seized Niu Chwang railway at the terminus of the Shan Hai Kwan line. This is the first step the Russians have taken on the right bank of the Amur. The Russian southern and northern armies have joined hands at Tchling, north of Mukden, thereby placing all of Manchuria east of the river Liao, and a portion west of the stream in the hands of Russia."

Dr. Morrison, in Monday's Times concludes his dramatic description of the siege of Peking. He expresses the deep obligation of all those confined in the British legation to the "splendid services of Rev. Frederick D. Gamewell, head of the Methodist mission board, to whom was due the designing and construction of all our defense, and who carried out in the most admirable manner Sir Claude MacDonald's ideas and suggestions."

He also refers to the "valuable services" rendered by Mr. Squiers, secretary of the United States legation.

The Times, commenting editorially upon Dr. Morrison's narrative, says: "The whole story justifies in the fullest manner Emperor William's attitude toward the authors of the atrocities. It proves beyond a reasonable doubt the responsibility of the high officials and the Tsung Li Yamen."

London, Oct. 15.—The Shanghai correspondent of the Morning Post writing Saturday, describes four distinct agitations in Kwang-Tung, Kwang Si, Sze-Chung and the Yang-Tze region, all of which are anti-dynastic rather than anti-foreign.

"If Sun Yat Sen is successful in the south," says the correspondent, "and his rebellion spreads over the Yang-Tze region, he will probably be aided by Prince Tuan, Tung Fu Hsiang and the Mohammedan leaders in the north-west."

The Chinese imperial troops, according to a dispatch to the Daily Chronicle, from Hong-Kong, dated Saturday, have recaptured Wei-Chou, on East river, where Sun Yat Sen, the reformer, had raised his flag, and have scattered the rebels.

The Standard published mail advices from Tien-Tsin giving a list of 54 documents that were seized in the Yamen of the Viceroy after the capture of the city and fell into the hands of the correspondent before the military authorities had seized the Yamen. These include receipts for money paid to Boxer generals for supplies to their troops of every kind, reports of actions and lists of casualties and rewards paid to generals and the families of the killed, all clearly proving that the authorities maintained the Boxer movement by lavish expenditure.

Shanghai, Oct. 15.—From Canton it is reported that the Kwangsi rebels have defeated the imperial troops on the borders of Kwang-Tung and that Gen. Su has resigned in consequence of his request for reinforcements being ignored.

Some Chinese soldiers desecrated the cemetery for foreigners at Nam-Shih-Tu, near Canton, and the viceroy had the offenders decapitated and dismissed their commander.

The fourth brigade from India has arrived at Taku, but owing to the gale, has not been able to land.

Sir Ernest M. Satow, who succeeds Sir Claude M. McDonald as British minister to China has arrived at Tien-Tsin.

Tien-Tsin, Oct. 14 (via Shanghai, Oct. 15).—Only a small escort accompanied Count von Waldersee and his staff, who left for Peking at 5 o'clock this morning. The length of the field marshal's stay at the capital has not been determined, but he expects to return to Tien-Tsin before cold weather sets in. Possibly he will make Shanghai his headquarters for the winter, as it is understood that the Germans do not contemplate active operations after the winter has begun.

The rapid fall of the Pei Ho is causing the allies to redouble their efforts to rush supplies to Peking.

Shanghai, Oct. 15.—The progress of the Chinese court toward Sian Fu, the new capital, has been delayed in consequence of the supposed Mohammedan rebels in the province of Shen Si.

Dr. Parker, the famous London Congregationalist preacher, pastor of the City Temple, who has announced his intention to retire next year, is 70 years old. He has been contemplating retirement ever since the death of his third wife last year.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson in the International Series for October 21, 1900.—The Lost Sheep and Lost Coin.

[Prepared by H. C. Lenington.]
THE LESSON TEXT.

Then drew near unto him all the publicans and sinners to hear him.

2. And the Pharisees and scribes murmured, saying: This man receiveth sinners and eateth with them.

3. And he spake this parable unto them, saying:

4. What man of you, having an hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it?

5. And when he hath found it, he layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing.

6. And when he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and neighbors, saying unto them: Rejoice with me; for I have found my sheep which was lost.

7. I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in Heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance.

8. Either what woman having ten pieces of silver, if she lose one piece, doth not light a candle, and sweep the house, and seek diligently till she find it?

9. And when she hath found it, she calleth her friends and her neighbors together, saying: Rejoice with me; for I have found the piece which I had lost.

10. Likewise, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.—Luke 15:1-10.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The study of this lesson should include a reading of Luke 14:25-35, this forming the link in Luke's account between last Sunday's lesson and the one assigned for to-day. The following analysis includes this passage:

Counting the Cost of Discipleship, 14:25-35. Jesus and the Pharisees, 15:1-3. The Lost Sheep and Lost Coin, 15:4-10.

(a) The Lost Sheep.
(b) The Lost Coin.
(c) Seeking the Lost.

(d) The Lost Found.
Rejoicing over the Found, 15:7-10.

Counting the Cost of Discipleship.

After speaking the parable of the great supper, portraying as it did a scene of festivity with its unbounded happiness and good cheer, nothing would so naturally occur to the Master as the other side of the picture. Figure it as we may, in this life there is no light that does not cast a shadow. The great law of compensation makes its claims upon us absolutely and without exception.

There is comfort in the thought for those who suffer and endure, but for the light-hearted and joyous it should bring out a sense of obligation, a sense of duty. To "eat bread in the kingdom of God" presupposes discipleship. This means joy, happiness and comfort, but it costs something. In the last ten verses of Luke 14 Jesus illustrates the importance of counting the cost, and how great the cost may be. If a man is to erect a building he has estimates made of the cost. If a king is to wage a war, he takes into account the chances in favor of victory and of defeat. The disciple is to erect a building, the building of character. The disciple is to wage a war, a war with the forces of sin and death. What is the cost of discipleship? It is the making of Christ and His righteousness supreme in this life. Cross-bearing is the test. The cross in Christ's time stood for the most awful and disgraceful of deaths. From this we may imply that cross-bearing does not mean the giving up of some one desire or making some other petty sacrifice, but it is to perform every duty and meet every danger in utter contempt of the consequences—so long as we are sure that what we do is for righteousness' sake.

The teaching is not that we should hate anybody. Christ's Gospel is a gospel of love. Jesus put love of neighbor side by side with love of God. What Jesus did clearly teach was that love of God was to be supreme, and that if love of anything less stood in the way of duty that lesser love was to be sacrificed to the greater love—the love of God and righteousness.

Jesus and the Pharisees.—It surprised the Pharisees that Jesus should associate with publicans and sinners. The publicans were Roman tax collectors and were considered as enemies of the Jewish people. Jesus, in reply, likens the publicans and sinners to lost sheep and lost coins.

The Lost Sheep and Lost Coin.—They are like lost sheep because they have wandered away from God into the wilderness, where life is in danger from starvation, thirst, wild beasts and the elements. They are sought because, like the coin, they are of real value only when doing something to accomplish the mission for which they were put into the world.

Rejoicing over the Found.—Heaven is a place of joy, and until all the world is redeemed the greatest joy known to the Heavenly host is "over one sinner that repenteth." That "repenteth" introduces the one active element on the part of the lost being. The sinner may be lost and found again, but if he repent not it will be as if he had never been found and given a chance to return to a life of righteousness and usefulness.

PITH AND POINT.

Men are not saved by sentiment. Love never turns back because it sees a mountain or hears a lion roar.

Are you putting any treasure where it cannot be stolen or burned up?

The hardest thing the devil ever tried to do was to starve a good man to death.

Egotism always looks at his "neighbor" through the wrong end of the telescope.

The devil's great aim is to make it easy for men to do wrong and hard to do right.—Ram's Horn.

CONNOISSEUR IN SEEDS.

He Planted Some Bulbs That Turned Out to Be Bearing Bulbs for a Bicycle.

"I have a good joke on myself," said the business man whose hobby is agriculture, says the Detroit Free Press. "My mind has always had a particular preference for seeds and roots, and I never miss an opportunity to indulge this fancy. Some time ago, in looking through an old tool box, I came across several peculiar looking seeds that at once aroused my interest. They were a little different from anything that I had discovered during my floricultural and agricultural experience, and I decided to plant them. Well, I did so, and for weeks I waited to see the strange fruit, flower or vegetable plant make an appearance, carefully nurturing the soil, and giving my pet bulbs the closest attention.

"Discouraged at length at their failure to part the soil and spring into life, I dug them up, and what do you suppose was the discovery that I made? Why, that my interesting and peculiar bulbs were nothing more nor less than those little bicycle bulbs that are an important part of the steel steed's mechanism. They had been laid away in the toolbox, and their size and rusted appearance made them resemble seeds. My wife and some of my intimate friends seem to think there is no excuse for such a ludicrous thing to happen to a man that has made a study of plants and bulbs, and they are never doing me a mischief and asking me when I expect to gather my crop of bicycles."

Saved From The Maelstrom of Catarrh How Peruna Saves Lives

Mrs. Col. E. J. Gresham, Treasurer Daughters of the Confederacy and President Hernden Village Improvement Society, writes the following letter from Hernden, Fairfax county, Va.:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

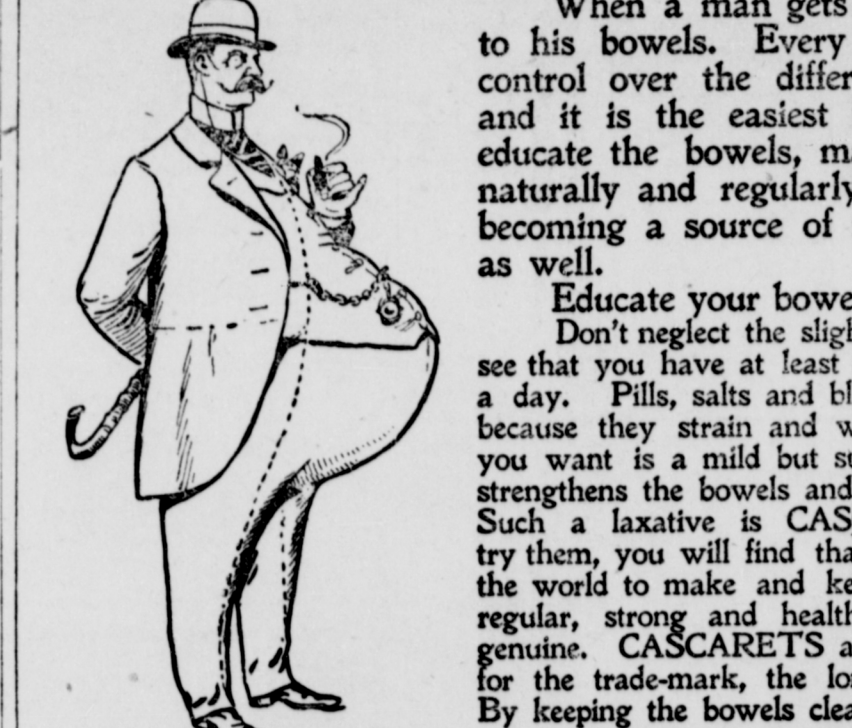

Gentlemen—"I cannot speak too highly of the value of Peruna. I believe that I owe my life to its wonderful merits. I suffered with catarrh of the head and lungs in its worst form, until the doctors fairly gave me up, and I despaired of ever getting well again.

"I noticed your advertisement and the splendid testimonials given by people who had been cured by Peruna, and determined to try a bottle. I felt but little better, but used a second and a third bottle and kept on improving slowly.

"It took six bottles to cure me, but they were worth a King's ransom to me. I talk Peruna to all my friends and am a true believer in its worth." Mrs. Col. E. J. Gresham.

Thousands of women owe their lives to Peruna. Tens of thousands owe their health to Peruna. Hundreds of thousands are praising Peruna in every state in the Union. We have on file a great multitude of letters with written permission for use in public print, which can never be used for want of space.

THE CITIZEN.

A Weekly.

The only Newspaper published in
BEREA - KENTUCKY.

OCTOBER 18, 1900.

The Debating Society.

As we said last week one of the best things for any community is a Literary Society or a Debating Club, and Prof. C. R. Raymond, now of the Extension Department of Berea College is organizing such clubs in various places under the name Citizen's Union.

He is also planning to furnish each week through the CITIZEN some material for the use of such societies so that the members can take up a course of reading and study. The first text-book proposed is the "Young Citizen," a copy of which is given with each subscription to the CITIZEN in any place where as many as six are taking the paper and have organized a Union.

To show what such a club can do we give a form of Constitution and By-Laws which suggest what any club may formulate and adopt.

CONSTITUTION.

ARTICLE I. Name.

The name of this society shall be the Citizens' Union of ARTICLE II. Object.

The object of this society shall be union for growth in all that makes good citizens and promotes the common welfare.

ARTICLE III. Members.

Any person may join by signing the Constitution and paying the regular fees.

ARTICLE IV. Officers.

The officers shall be a President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer, and Librarian. Together they shall act as the Trustees of the local Union.

ARTICLE V. Fees.

Each member shall subscribe annually for the society paper, THE CITIZEN, and pay such other fees as the local Union by its By-Laws may direct, (provided that when more than one member comes from the same household one subscription will admit all, but all will pay local dues.)

ARTICLE VI. Meetings.

Regular meetings shall be held as the By-Laws of each Union may direct. The Trustees shall arrange the program which shall include the following exercises: Roll Call, Devotional Exercises, Review of last meeting, Recitation, Essay or Oration, and Debate, besides such other exercises as the Union may vote to introduce. These regular programs shall follow the plans outlined in THE CITIZEN.

ARTICLE VII. Federation.

Local Unions may be formed of six or more persons in any community and the aim shall be to combine the local Unions into District Unions of convenient size for holding quarterly conventions. A federation of the Unions of the county may arrange for holding an annual People's Institute.

BY-LAWS.

[Note: Each Union shall adopt such By-Laws as it sees fit, the following are suggested.]

1. The President and other officers shall hold office for six months.

2. Meetings shall be held at the schoolhouse each Friday night.

3. Each member shall pay quarterly dues of five cents to meet current local expenses.

4. No member shall leave the room during the meeting without getting permission from the presiding officer.

5. For an absence from a regular meeting or a failure to perform an assigned exercise, any member shall be fined five cents, unless such failure or absence is excused by the Trustees. Failure to pay fines shall cause any member to be suspended from the rights and privileges of the Union.

6. Robert's Rules shall be the authority on points of order.

7. Books or magazines may be drawn from the library by any member. For keeping such book or magazine over two weeks a fine of one cent shall be levied for each additional day.

8. The judges upon the debate shall give their vote by ballot for the side which has been best argued; after their votes have been collected by the Secretary, the subject shall be open for general debate, in which any member may speak not to exceed five minutes. At the close of general debate the members shall declare, by a rising vote, their own opinions on the question under discussion. The Secretary shall then declare the vote of the judges upon the merits of the debaters.

For all fresh cuts or wounds, in either the human subject or in animals, as a dressing, Ballard's Snow Liniment is excellent; while for sores on working horses, especially if slow to heal, or suppurating, its healing qualities are unequalled. Price 25 and 50 cts. S. E. Welch, Jr.

Correspondence

Special attention is called to this week's article in the Home Column.

Rockcastle County.

Clear Creek. Good Association meeting at Clear Creek. There was some unbecoming conduct on the part of a few men and boys who should have known better.

Owsley County.

Booneville. Remember the Teachers Association of this District and all bring some dinner.

Robert Taylor of Bear Run, is planning to move to Meadow Creek in the near future.

H. B. Cawood living near this place has raised a pumpkin this year which measures 64 inches in circumference and weighs 75 lbs.

Your correspondent visited Elk Lick this County a few days ago, where Profs. Dinsmore and Raymond were giving a series of lectures.

They were having a large attendance and are doing a good work.

Jackson County.

Evergreen. A good rain here Oct. 11.

I. J. Lake whom we reported better last week has the flux now.

Our school at Pine Grove is progressing nicely.

There is an old saying "the still sow gets the slop." If that is true Beckham is ahead in this county, for I never hear his name.

Corn is not as plentiful in this county as people thought.

There are lots of people talking of moving to Berea this fall.

Madison County.

Wallaceton. Mrs. Steve Holcomb is seriously ill.

Mrs. Ike Bodkins is also very ill. The infant child of Albert and Mary Corbin died last Friday night.

Miss Ella Bowlin was here from Berea over Sunday with friends.

The shower which fell a week ago did not do much good in this part of the county.

The residence of Thomas Kinnard caught on fire Sunday morning from the cook stove. The roof was in a flame before it was discovered, but by quick work it was put out.

Rev. J. R. Howes, pastor of the M. E. Church could not fill his appointment Sunday on account of sickness in his family. Bro. Grider, who was pastor years ago, preached instead.

Paint Lick. Long live the CITIZEN and all its friends.

A good number of our citizens attended the show at Richmond.

Mr. Williams candidate for Congress was here on the 9th inst. in the interest of his candidacy. He made a speech stating very plainly his reason for being a Republican and why he was for McKinley, Roosevelt, and Yerkes.

Mrs. Green Roberts died after a long illness and much suffering on the 10th. She leaves a husband, five children and a host of friends to mourn her loss. She will be greatly missed in religious society.

The most of our farmers are done sowing wheat.

Most all the Bryan and Beckham sympathizers attended the barbecue between Wallaceton and Berea.

THE SCHOOL.

A SPELLING DEVICE.

MYRTLE RAPEL.

Spelling was formerly taught by giving pupils a list of words and having them write each word a certain number of times, or study each word orally until they were able to spell them. The work instead of being a pleasure, proved an irksome task, especially to the younger ones, and they soon came to dread the spelling lesson.

To spell a word correctly we need to have an exact image of it, and this can be gotten by the children more easily and accurately by having them look at the word, get a mental picture of it, they can then reproduce it on paper. The following plan for teaching spelling has been tried very successfully with six- and seven-year-old children:

Several lessons are given on imagining objects to train the eye to observe quickly and accurately. A few suggestions as to exercise on visualizing may prove helpful.

1. Let one child stand in front of the school and with his back to them call the names of all the children in the room.

2. Have children hide their eyes; teacher touch three or four on the head as a signal for them to pass to the front of their class; the children at the seats look quickly, hide their eyes again and after the children are seated ask one child to call them up again in the order in which they stood.

3. Bring three or four children to the front of the room; have children hide their eyes; teacher change the positions or attitudes of those in front; have children glance, hide their eyes again; pupils in front take their former position and select one child to place them as they were.

4. Place three objects, a book, eraser, and pencil on the table. Have children look, turn their backs and tell which was in the middle; on the right. When these can be readily named, another object should be added. Later another group may be placed and after allowing the child to look, ask which was in the center in the first group, which on the right in the second, or name the objects from right to left in each group.

After giving enough of these exercises to sufficiently train the pupils to observe correctly, the written word should be given. At first short words and only one at a time. Write the word, have children look, close their eyes, and if they think they have the form erase it and ask them to write it. At first not more than three words should be given as a lesson, but the number may be increased and words lengthened as the pupils are capable of taking more. Couplets and paragraphs of poems can be given in a few lessons and at the end of the lesson period the pupil will not only have learned how to spell all the words correctly, but many will have unconsciously memorized the sentences.

Lessons suggestive of the month are fitting. In October Susan Coolidge's "I'll tell you how the leaves came down," the first stanza was given in five lessons, one line at each lesson. In December the names of toys, Santa Claus, Christmas were given, and at the end of the month many neat, correctly spelled letters were written to Santa Claus.

The training exercises should be continued right along. There is no limit to the kinds and varieties of these exercises, and the tactful teacher will never find any difficulty in keeping the pupils attention keen and alert.

My Kind Of Man.

The following verses were written for the CITIZEN by Henry A. Lane, a former student of Berea College:

The kind of man for me is one,
Who seeks no praise for what he's done;
Who labors not for man's applause,
But gets an honored name because,
With an honest heart for the right strives he,
And that's the kind of man for me.

Tho' crowned with honor he does not scorn
The honest rags of the lowly born,
Good cheer and hope to all he brings,
And looks at the sunny side of things.
His manly heart is as light and free
As the morning breeze; He's the man for me.

He knows a smile and a warm hand-shake,
Off from a stone a heart will make,
From which kind words drive out despair,
And plant an honest purpose there.
He looks for the good in men; and he
Is the kind of man I delight to see.

Nature can only feed the flame of life with the food eaten which is digested. Herbine will re-invigorate a weak stomach, and so improve digestion as to insure the natural bloom of health. Price 50 cts. S. E. Welch Jr.

THE HOME.

(Edited pro tem by the Manager.)

Miss Josephine A. Robinson, Principal of the Ladies' Department, of Berea College, wishes to say to the mothers and daughters of our Mountain Homes, that they can find a ready market and good prices for all the homespun they can make.

Miss Robinson furnishes the following information as to what are most in demand and how to manufacture them:

Satable Homespun.

Coverlets should be indigo blue and white, and the figure in weaving small with few skips and those short ones. The breadths should be one yard wide and the coverlets not less than seven and one-half feet long. When the two breadths are sewed together all the figures must "hit in seam" exactly. If they do not the beauty and desirability of the coverlet are ruined.

Linsey should be made from natural brown sheep's wool. It should be a yard wide. The chain should be colored with a fast black dye, and be darker than the wool. It must be even in color and weaving. Striped linsey is not wanted.

Jeans may be made from black wool with white carded in, the chain being black.

Linsey should be well woven. There is always a demand for good linen.

The yarn used in weaving all homespun goods must be spun on hand wheels, factory spun yarn is not desired.

The cotton chain must be of good quality. The weaving must be well done, the filling well beaten in, and the selvages even.

If any woman wants to sell homespun to Berea College, she should, if possible, call on Miss Robinson at Ladies' Hall and find out how it should be made in order to sell for a good price. If the weaver lives at a distance from Berea she should write to Miss Robinson, who will answer her letter and tell her what the College will buy.

If the weaver cannot get good indigo or madder, or good cotton chain she should consult Miss Robinson, who hopes to be able to supply such articles.

This industry is worth reviving and every woman and girl on the farms ought to be interested in it, for it will bring ready money, comfort, and independence. The following prices are offered for your work:

	YARD
Good Homespun Linen, 40c
" " Linsey, 50c
Patent does not received.
Old fashioned Indigo blue preferred.

Good Homespun Jeans, 50c
" Dress Flannel, 60c
Good Coverlets, well woven and matched, from four to six dollars.

It is a great thing that Berea College is finding a chance for the mountain women to get good money for their homespun.

Ladies who visit Berea from Louisville and Chicago and other cities like to get things like those their grandmothers used to make. And they think the homespun more beautiful as well as more durable than factory-made.

We wish the name of every lady who can spin, weave, or dye. Address: Miss Josephine A. Robinson, Berea, Ky.
